THERE IS NO DEATH.

There is no death! The stars go down
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jewelled crown
They shine for evermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread
Shall change beneath the summer showers
To golden grain, or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize
To feed the hungry moss they bear;
The forest leaves drink daily life
From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
The flowers may fade and pass away;
They only wait through winter hours
The coming of the May.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them "dead."

He leaves our hearts all desolate;
He plucks our fairest, sweetest flowers;
Transplanted into bliss they now
Adorn immortal bowers.

The bird-like voice, whose joyous tones
Made glad this scene of sin and strife,
Sings now the everlasting song
Amid the tree of life.

And when he sees us amid our toil,
Or heart too sore for faint and vice,
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in paradise.

Born into that undying life,
They leave no lot to come again;
With joy we welcome them, the same
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
These dear immortal spirits tread,
For all the boundless universe
Is life; there are no dead.

THE INCURABLE.

BY HARDLEY HARKER.

"O! it off."

"Better make sure that you'll like it when done," cried my gardener, from his ladder up the tree. "For when a branch is cut, sir, if you don't happen to like it you can't change it." And he paused with his saw in his hand.

I knew what he referred to. We had cut off limbs and cut down several lawn trees the summer before; and in one particular case I was greatly displeased with my own action, for the tree once down I sorely missed it; the vista opened was decidedly unsightly, showing the end of my neighbor's old outhouses while meant only to get a better view of the mountains. It was vexatious to think that the felled tree would not grow again, or that a new one would take a score of my life's years to arrive at proper size.

There are some things that once done can never be undone. There are ills that are incurable.

Not even the most sincere repentance can set the wrong right again. A scar in the face can never be effaced; the marks of the duel will ever remain. Better think twice before you draw sword. The memory of an insult is incurable, an apology will not wash it out; no subsequent kindness will quite cleanse it from the victim's mind; it may never be spoken of, but the consciousness is there. One of the few indelible things in this world is an insult. A falsehood can never be cured. I defy you ever to fully recover your respect for a man whom you have caught once in a lie. A broad story, a coarse jest is an incurable cancer on the tongue of a gentlemen.

He may have uttered it thoughtlessly, while the fish did not bite, and every one in the room are ready to laugh; but, long days after, when you see that gentleman in a lady's parlor, or in his bank, or in his pulpit—alas! you will find that dripping story seems to have lost its power to tongue. A man of a foul ever, under any circumstances whatever, to utter a nasty thing. A neighborly rudeness is incurable. You sent over for a simple favor, and your neighbor did not digest his breakfast well that morning; he sent you back a curt reply. He can never undo that. All may be peaceful again between you, and he may exert himself to cause you to forget it; but you never do. A stray hen, or hog, or cow in a neighbor's field leads to a word or two—short, sharp, and hateful. The marks of those hoofs never are obliterated from the lawns. One of the most incurable scratches our skin ever receives is the refusal to do a small neighborly kindness. It is more persistent than deep wounds in the market, where men expect to give and take blows heavy enough to kill. It has the poison of a cat's scratch, or a spiders bite. Better be torn by a lion.

A sinister remark, a mean reflection about a man's children, is incurable. The mother will never get over the little slighting laugh and motion of your fan when her daughter finished her part at the high-school exhibition. That woman will never like you again. A man would not remember it two minutes, but a woman will keep it forever in her very soul that you reflected upon the dress of her little ones—something which you let drop about a "perfect guy of a hat." The behavior of children is a very tender spot also. If you wish to give marital offence, just remark that your neighbor's boy is "the worst boy in the village—no manners, no bringing up." Years sway the boy's parents will watch your own boy, and, remembering what you said, compare their own son with yours. Indeed, I think they would laugh gladly if they saw your son slip and fall.

It is very provoking to think so many trees and branches which, once cut off or down, will never grow again. We often cut so carelessly and hastily. Yet learning the lesson marks the really wise man. Our own hearts and lives are vulnerable by the same incurable wounds. A man thinks he has live opportunities passed; he throws away two of them entirely; he lays up two more on a shelf, thinking he may return to them; he adopts one with all his might, and pushes it. Now, is it not true, that the four chances are cut off forever, I tell you they never come again. Having chosen his one, he must make or break on that. Branches cut off do not grow again. Choosing is momentous business. To throw away an opportunity is a very bold thing to do. The average man does not have many in the course of one short life. As to laying of obstacles on a shelf for a future day, that, too, is very uncertain. Somebody else may step between. We go to look for them they are withered, or some other fellow has made off with them. Cut, if you think best. But make up your mind that branches once cut, will not grow again to bear any fruit for you to eat. As you trim the tree, so must you get used to it.

Is it worth our while to recognize the fact that the incurable is in the world; that there are some roads, down which if a man turns, he never can retrace his steps. We may not always know when we are encountering the chongeless. But it is a good thing for one to know that there are fixed facts. No regrets, no tears, no new light, no appeal to a higher court, no hand of a friend to help you out, no paying the fine and going free, no compromise.

A fixed fact is a stubborn thing. If you marry him, that is a fixed fact. Ten thousand divorces concentrated on your desired head can never get you back again into the light-hearted girlish life you have to-day. So be sure that you know what you are about. But marriage is only one illustration. The fixed fact may confront us at any moment, in the most ordinary acts of life. There is a world of mewkish sentimental softness taught to people nowadays. We are pitied if we have done wrong, and are told it is never too late to mend. We are encouraged to just try a thing and see how we like it. We are tempted to experiment and act thoughtlessly by well meaning people, who hope more than they know. Against all this I suggest to you that a little teaching with iron in it would do us good. Be careful what you do; for, as true as there is a God of order above the sky, the majority of our mistakes are beyond remedy, the greater part of our blunders are incurable. Having made our bed we must lie on it.

I have hopes of a drunkard. Out of a thousand at five-and-twenty years of age not two are ever cured so that they are safe. Unchastity is relatively incurable; a woman never reforms, a man very rarely. The gambler will never be cured, nor the professional thief, nor devotee of the fast horse. You will rarely find a man to recover from a habit of borrowing money. He who is lazy or weak is done for; he will be a drone through the rest of his life. A growling boy may be indolent and get over it; but a full-grown, lazy young man is incurable. Likewise the habitual shirk.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Texas, by the remarkable recovery of Mrs. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills. By the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds. Trial bottles of this Great Discovery free at Z. THE FARMER'S STORY.

A Terrible Night in an English Inn—The Chance Substitution—Shocked by Mistake of an Only Son—The Intended Victim's Escape.

"Ah, sir, I see you are admiring my flowers! Well, they are pretty—that they are—though I doubt os some would call the marigolds and carnations common and old-fashioned. You don't see many of 'em now in your fine new-fangled gardens, do you? It's a pretty little place, this, ain't it, sir? And it's my own, too—my very own—and will go to my grandson after me. He's a good lad, he is—it's him as looks after the garden. Mighty fond of flowers, he is, and really proud he'll be, I know, when he hears as a fine town gentleman has taken notice of 'em! Ah, I was fond of gardening, too, in my time! But I am getting an old man now—eighty-five I am, come Christmas—and I can't expect to be spared much longer, though I'm hale and hearty yet, thank Heaven! Ah, times have altered, sir, since my young days! For the better, you say? Well, things are grander now than they were then, but sometow I seem to like the old times best, perhaps because I was young and strong in 'em. And talking of old times reminds me of something that once happened to me. Like to hear it, sir. Well, so you shall, and welcome. If you don't mind waiting an hour or so with an old chap like me. Sit down, then, on that bench and make yourself comfortable.

"Now've been to Chelmsford, perhaps? Then may-be you know the 'Saracen's Head?' Well, close to where that now stands there used to be an inn called the 'Swan.' A queer old place it was, to be sure, with its casement windows and overhanging gables. I was living at Ralphan then—it's nigh upon sixty years ago—a farmer I was, and had been married only a short time to a dear little wife as I loved true and well till she died, poor lass!

"One cold December day I started for Braintree to look at some stock as I thought of buying. As it was a two-days' journey I meant to stup at Chelmsford for the night and go on early the next day. I didn't leave home till about two, and I had a weary road to travel, so that the darkness came on before I reached the gibbet on the edge of the common; and I can tell you that my flesh crawled, as the saying is, when it galloped past at full speed. It was a bleak, cold night, and that and bad, so that it was late before I rode into Chelmsford.

"I put up at the 'Swan'—that being the first inn I came to—and was standing watching the ostler rubbing down my old mare—for I always attended to that first thing—when the landlord came slowly out to me; he was a short, sherp-faced man, with great black eyes that had an uneasy sort of look in 'em. I told him I had a long ride and was glad enough to get safe into his yard—for I'd gold about me and we'd heard horrible tales of the robberies and murders on the King's highway. Well, he showed me into a long, low room—the kitchen it was—with a brick floor and a bright fire burning.

"'There's a uolay lot in the parlor, sir, said he; 'you'll be quiet and cozy here, for may be you're tired and chilly after your ride in the wind.'

"I ordered a steak and some wine, and, as I ate my supper, I thought to myself that I could't well have chosen a better place than the 'Swan' to stop at. After I had finished I called for the landlord and he came, but not by the landlord, but I might as well have been alone for he never spoke a word, but sat staring into the fire with a wicked look in his eyes that I didn't like, though I didn't take much notice of it then. Ah, I know now what his thoughts were as he gazed moodily into the glowing coals! He was thinking of the disgrace brought upon his name by his only son, and wondering where the money was to come from that must be procured somehow if his boy was to be saved from ruin. And then no doubt he planned to murder me—ah, it's all true, sir—I've got his confession by me now—and lay me down by the river-side, in the meadow behind the stable. Then he meant to turn my mare out before dawn so that the servants might think I had left early; and then, you see, when it was found, people would think something had happened to me on the road to Braintree. Well, my companion roused himself after a time and began asking me what I thought of the country, if I had ridden far, whether I had been advised to put at the Swan, and such like questions. I answered them freely enough, never supposing that he asked them for any other reason then just to keep up the conversation. I asked him to be up early and he promised he would do so.

"'I'll do it, myself,' said he, 'for the girl and the ostler will be abed.'

"Then he called his wife and told her to bring me a candle, which she did. She was a coarse-looking, carbuncled woman' and I noticed when she showed me to my room that her hand was shaking, and her voice sounded thick as she bade me a civil 'good night.'

"My bedroom was a long, low room, with queer old furniture, quaint carved chairs and a great four-post bedstead, which seemed as big as a heerse. There was no look to the door, and the bolts were rusty, so I could only put the latch down. I thought of putting a chair against it, but that seemed childish and no protection after all. The night was wet and windy, and the sky as black as ink. Try as I would I couldn't get to sleep, and there I lay listening to the ghostly tapping of the ivy leaves against the window, and thinking of the evil look in the landlord's eyes, and all the horrid stories I had ever read come crowding into my mind, when suddenly I started up in bed, wide awake enough, for I heard something or some one climbing up the ivy to my window. I lay with palpitating heart and straining eyes, listening to the horrible ghostly rustling of the leaves, which seemed nearer. Suddenly a thought struck me; and I arose, hastily smoothing the bedclothes, as though the bed had not been slept in. I had just time to creep under the bed, when the window was shaken open, and somebody softly slipped in. It was a man, and, listening intently, I heard him sigh wearily to himself, as if he were tired out. Then he got into my bed, drew the clothes over him, and in a few minutes I heard him snoring. You can imagine how pleasant I felt, and the scamp had my money-bag under his pillow, too!" What was to be done? I thought of my happy home and the dear little wife now dreaming of me, and the thought of her gave me courage. I determined to snatch at my money and fight for it with the unseen visitor to the death, if need be. I was crawling from under the bed, when I heard another sound, nearing the door this time. In a minute the latch was quietly lifted, the door was gently pushed open, and I saw the landlord glide into the room. Then a hand holding a candle stole in at the door—only a hand; but I knew those quivering fingers well enough. The man crept on tiptoe to the bed and leaning softly over the sleeper, stabbed him to the heart. There was one deep groan and all was over. The murderer threw the money from under the pillow and crept stealthily to the door, glancing behind him as though he feared the dead man would get up and follow him.

"Shaking all over and with hair on end from head to foot, I dragged, crept out from my hiding-place, stepped about to my clothes, and, after steadied a moment, dozed with horror, followed the guilty couple. Their room was almost opposite mine, and I could see the light under the door, which was barely closed. I pushed it open peeped in. The table faced the door, and there they stood with their backs to me, so intent upon the money that I crept close to them without being heard.

"I thought, in the sound of a whisper—there is more then enough to save our boy! How they shine! And all ours, wife—ours!'

"'No, mine, murderer!' I shouted with a voice of thunder, and snatching the nearest bag he was counting I dashed the light from the women's hand and fled back swiftly to the room where the dead men lay.

"Opening the window, I groped about with one hand for an ivy bough, clinging somehow to the sill with the other, and at last managed to scramble down, reaching the ground bruised, shaken, breathless. As I rested a moment to get my breath, I heard from the room above an awful cry sung out in a woman's voice.

"'My boy, my boy, my only son!'

"I disnbered over the gate which led into the street. A watch-box stood close by in the shadow, and a watchman told my story to the watchmen. He stared in horror, as well he might, and wented to fetch his mete; but I told him we were more than a match for those we should find at the inn, so he came with me. A frightened servant opened the door to us, and I led the way to the room I had just quitted. The watchman bent down and peered into the dead man's face.

"'Ah,' he whispered, 'it's as I feared! It's their own son—they didn't know he was home, and so they mistook him for you, sir.'

"I felt myself turn queer and giddy, for I knew the meaning of that pitiful cry: 'My only son!'

"And what of the murderers? They had not so much as tried to escape, and the door wasn't even barred against us. The woman lay moaning on the floor; the man sat huddled up in a chair by the fed. When we entered he held out his hands to be manacled without interfug a word. When I told him how it happened that his son had fallen a victim instead of me, he just stared in my face and made no sign that he heard the ghastly tale.

"Well, sir, that's about all. The mother, poor soul, died raving mad, and the man was hanged at Tyburn; but not another word did he speak from the first to the last save once—and that was when the Judge passed sentence on him. Then he raised his head, and, with a look in his eyes which I can never forget, he said:

"'An old, old man, may lord—my only son!'

"That's all, sir. The strongest story you ever heard? Well, dare say it is; but it's all true every word of it; and I've got the papers to prove it if you'll be pleased to come in and see 'em you'll be welcome as flowers in May, that you will. Not now? Well, then, I'll bid you good day, and thank you kindly for letting me talk to you, for it does me good to chet o bit sometimes, that it do! Good day, sir, and o pleasant walk to you!"

Don't eat in a Hurry.

A healthy journey days not people ought to take three-quarters of an hour for dinner. This is well if there is enough dinner to hold out so long. The penalty for hurrying meals, as most people do, is a grevious attack of dyspepsia. In such a case you will have to resort to Brown's Iron Bitters for cure, as did Mr. J. R. Pinkston, Shorter's Depot, Ala., who writes, "I found relief in Brown's Iron Bitters after years of suffering from dyspepsia."

Church Etiquette.

Always come to church late. It attracts more attention to you. If you are ugly and awkward put on fine clothes and people will look at them. The front seats are best for hearing, but the back seats are best for flirting etc. Which you should choose, depends upon what you come for.

Talk to the person next to you. Rome was saved by a goose, and probably you may save somebody the trouble of thinking by speaking to them.

The fly leaf of a hymn book is good to write notes on. The people who paid for them may object to the vandalism, but you will never hear of that.

Think of something funny during the sermon. A silly grin is the best antidote to a serious thought you could possibly invent.

Spit on the floor and if it get very filthy the ladies of the church will scour it up and get it in a good condition to be spit on again.

Look at your watch frequently, it will remind the preacher that time is very precious to those who do not wish to enjoy eternity.

A good time to leave is just after the preacher takes his text. It is very annoying to the sleepy part of the congregation, but that does not effect you.

Never go out quietly. The noise you make shows your contempt for them in as near equal as their contempt for you as you can make it.

Visit all the churches during the hour of service. One congregation is not enough for on ehie bodied rough to disturb in one hour.

By observing these rules you can rank yourself as a leader in any community in a very short time.

Self-Reliance.

[New York Ledger.]

Do not rely upon others for success, but rather rely upon yourself. A young man must chiefly be dependent on his own labor for subsistence. It is found by all men of experience, that in so far as one trusts to his own exertions solely, he will be apt to flourish; and in so far as he leans and depends upon others, he will be the reverse. Nothing can give so good a general assurance of well-doing as the personal activity of the individual, day by day exerted. If a man, on the contrary, suddenly finds in the midst of such a career, a prospect of some advantage which seems likely to enrich him at once, or if he fails into the heritage of some antiquated claims to property, which he thinks it necessary to prosecute, it is time to leave the beaten path at that moment, and is finally ruined. The only true way to make a happy progress through this world is to go on in a determined, persevering pursuit of one good object, neither turning to the right nor to the left, making the best use as much as possible our pleasure, and not permitting ourselves to awake from our dreams of activity till we suddenly find ourselves at the goal of our wishes, with fortune within our grasp.

Open Your Window.

American women do not seem to understand that they sod very much to their natural consumptions by living in darkened rooms. Houses from which the sun is excluded are not wholesome. There is always a damp depressing condition in them that makes itself evident at once to a sensitive temperament. The minds and bodies of all who live in such houses are effected by it. Both health and spirits are depressed. Their occupants have not only the depressing effect of the lack of light and seem to forget that they need it, but the reaction consequent upon living in unwholesome conditions. All the rooms in the house should have both light and sunshine freely admitted at all times when they are in daily use or not. They are thus kept sweet, and are in good condition when they are wanted Many a women and child have been sacrificed to save the carpets and keep out the flies. Many a fit of illness has resulted from the same cause. Many a disappointed, cheerless life can be traced back to sunless rooms as a beginning. Multitudes of women and children are only half living to-day because only half fed. Sunshine and light out-of-doors are as much food for the body and soul as the fruits and grains and vegetables that we take into our stomachs; and we cannot get a sufficient of them as of food. The more we have the better. Open your windows wife, then, my sisters, and let the sun, that always carries health in its rays, have free access to every part of your homes. Screens will keep out the flies, and if you have occasion to temper the heat of the sun, a window curtain that can be rolled up or down at will.

HARTFORD WEEKLY HERALD.

JOHN F. BARRETT, } Editors.
NANCY JANE JONES. }

WEDNESDAY JANUARY 13.

FOR SALE.

To the Printing Fraternity:

We have two pairs of good seven column chases, with iron side and end sticks, a lot of wood type that has been used awhile and a lot of material we will sell. The chases have been used and are somewhat dusty, but type-tight. For the chases we will take $7 per pair, for the wood-type one cent per character and for the cases twenty-five cents apiece. THE HERALD.

On last Friday, the U. S. Senate confirmed the appointment of Mr. Hunter Wood as Collector of Internal Revenue for this the Second District.

Our Representative, Hon Jesse S. Williams, has been appointed chairman of the committee on Enrollments, and is a member of the committee on Ways and Means.

The State of Kentucky, paid out to Grand and Petit juries during the year 1885, $236,742.02. The right sad trial by jury is a pretty costly luxury to the people of the State.

T. R. McBEATH, of Leitchfield, Judge of the Sixth Judicial District, is a candidate for re-election. He is an able, impartial, honorable, upright Judge, and richly deserves re-election.

Hon. JOHN SHERMAN was nominated by the Republican caucus of the Ohio Legislature last week for re-election as U. S. Senator, and was yesterday re-elected. His nomination was without opposition.

Hon. W. R. HAYNES, of Leitchfield, is a candidate for re-election to Commonwealth's Attorney for the Sixth Judicial District. He has made an efficient prosecutor, and deserves an endorsement in the way of a re-election.

Hon. S. E. HILL has introduced a bill in the Senate to regulate and equalize the jurisdiction of quarterly, police and justices courts. Also a bill, regulating assignments, for the benefit of creditors. Both bills were referred to the committee on Courts of justice.

NANCY JANE JONES, a favorite character about the Hartford HERALD for a long time, has at last got herself into business. Barrett has inveigled her into accepting an editorship on his paper. Nancy wields a ready pen, and will prove a valuable addition to the HERALD.—Soubeam.

Hon. SAM E. HILL has been appointed chairman of the committee on Courts of Justice and is a member of three other Senate committees, viz: Banks and Insurance, Printing, and Retrenchment and Reform. A better chairman for the committee on Courts of Justice could not have been found in the body.

SPEAKER CARLISLE announced his committees last Thursday. He gave twenty chairmanships to the West, nineteen to the South, eight to the Middle States, and one to New England. Kentucky gets three, viz; Mr. Willis, Rivers and Harbors; Mr. Robertson, Expenditures in the War Department, and Mr Halsell, Private Land Claims.

JUDGE A. B. MONTGOMERY, of Hardin county, is announced in this issue as a candidate for Congress, in this district. He is an able lawyer, a man of superior intelligence, and excellent business sense; a sober, discreet, moral man, and has all the elements necessary to make a successful representative and is a regular Jeffersonian Democrat.

The Democratic members of the legislature met in caucus last Friday night and nominated Dr. John D Woods for re-election as State Printer and Binder. The Danville Tribune, Murphy, Stoddard, Johnston, Yeoman gang, did not get a corporals guard of followers. The caucus also nominated Mrs. Virginia Hanson for re-election as Librarian.

We met in Ohio county a few days since, Judge A. B. Montgomery, of Elizabethtown, who is now a candidate for Congress in the Fourth District. The Judge says he is going to be the next Congressman from that district, and from what we know of his genial and mixing qualities, we should not wonder if it is true. The district has not a better or stronger man, than is Judge Montgomery.—Muhlenberg Echo.

ELSEWHERE in this issue will be seen the announcement of Judge A. B. Montgomery, as a Democratic candidate for Congress, in this the Fourth District. The Judge was Robertson's warmest contestant in the last race, but in this one it is predicted that Robertson will be his warmest contestant. The Judge is one of the most finished gentlemen of our district, and combines all the traits and merits required to make a Congressman, and if the people don't elect him this time, we will want to walk around and see what's the matter.—Sunbeam.

What Nancy Jane Jones Says About Editing a Paper.

DEAR READERS:—When I seed mi name in the HERALD as a Editer I jist sot down and laffed and laffed. I then turned the paper sidewise, and up side down and kept a laffin, until the great big tears run down mi furrowed face, for fur hit was plum blank the puriest site I ever set mi thies on in. Land sakes! I felt mi head a swelling, and felt jist like gittin up and knocking the sheers and paste to smithereens. Well I mose say hit is the only time I ever wanted to be a man, so that I could part mi hair in the middle and put mi hat on kinder back and one sided, put a cigar in mi mouth, take hold of the lapells of mi coat and strut up and down the street, and of I met eny one what was not within ra give me the whole pavement, wiy jist flu them off. Land sakes! I left powerful grand like, and mi hart jist kept a swellin. Well, that site after I went to bed, I dreamed that mi bed had got in to be as big as a barrel and that instead of havin eny truble that mi bed had filled full of a liquid, and that when I tried in rize up, I would all roll about, that mi body was in little and did not have strength to raze my head. Land sakes! I couldn't believe mi own ies when I waked up and felt round and found that hit were only a dream. Well, I is jist a goin to say this, if helpin in edit a paper one week makes sich a fule of me, fu weeks will about ruin me, and I will have to quit, cause I is a feared I will be to biggity to speek to eny body.

Sound Argument.

[Elizbethtown News.

Anyone who is at all familiar with the sales of real estate, made either under judicial decree or court execution, has not failed to observe how frequently large and valuable landed interests are sacrificed because of present inefficient legal means provided for advertising such sales, which in many cases works a great hardship on the unfortunate debtor by the sacrifice of his property at inadequate prices. This should be remedied. And in order to give publicity to all such sales, and to induce bidders to attend, thus insuring something like a fair value for lands sold, such lands should be advertised in the newspapers published in the counties where the land is sold.—Bardstville Enterprise

Our contemporary writes good common sense and right to the point, and we have an instance in our mind that illustrates what he says. One of the best farms in Hardin county was sold under court execution the other day. The farm was worth from ten to twelve thousand dollars, but on account of there being no newspaper advertisement we do not think a hundred people knew of the sale, and the consequence the farm did not bring over eight thousand dollars. Probably two thousand dollars worth of property would have been saved by the use of a few dollars worth of printer's ink.

Noble Resolutions.

The Mercer County Democratic Executive Committee has adopted the following resolutions, which, if observed, will serve greatly toward purifying politics in Kentucky:

"That no candidate who himself uses money or whisky to aid in securing the nomination, or who knowingly permits the use of money or whisky or anything of value on his behalf by friends or others can receive the official sanction of this committee as the nominee of the party. It is further

"Resolved, That on satisfactory proof being produced before this committee that any candidate has violated the above order, such candidate, if having the highest number of votes at the primary, shall be rejected by this committee, and the person receiving the next highest number of votes who does not also violate this provision shall be declared the nominee of the party. All charges of the violation of resolution to be preferred against candidates must be presented to the committee on Wednesday following the primary election."

Sulphur Herald:

JANUARY, 5th, 1886.—A very successful meeting of sixteen days, has just closed at Cool Spring church, with near 30 conversions and 30 additions to the church. The meeting was conducted by Rev. H. Brown, pastor of the church and Rev. D. J. K. Mathis. These dear brethren won much love by their arduous and faithful labor. We congratulate the community, by saying, the good behavior of the large congregations was almost unprecedented.

Our school, conducted by Miss Mattie Purns, will close in about two weeks. Miss Mattie is liked very much in this community, being a lady of more than ordinary attainments and refinement.

W. T. Owen, of Burns, Texas, is in this, his native community. He very much resembles a Texas jack rabbit, only not looking quite so well.

This community is pleased to see in your last issue, that you have shut down on the long and wearisome controversy between "School Boy" and "Saggs." As far I am concerned, I don't have the least inclination to read stale sketches from ancient histories, mixed with as much slang and vituperation. Empty wagons always have, and always will, make the most noise. Good correspondence, such as "Rural" and some others that I could mention, I shall be both glad, long columns, with nothing in them, will kill any paper. I have been a subscriber for the HERALD, a number of years and cannot do without it. Although the HERALD is a Democratic journal, and I am a little the other way, I read along all the same, making all the allowances and all because I cannot help myself too. The most objections I now have to the Democratic party, is the large number of candidates and generally the ugliest men of the county.

Rockport.

ROCKPORT KY., JAN. 11, 1886.—Friday during that severe snow storm, uncle Elias Kirtley started to Paradise with the mail. His friends advised, his wife begged, and his son offered to pay him not to go, but it was his duty and though seventy-seven years old, he rode out into that blinding storm with the promptitude and courage of a hero. His return time is 6 15, after dark. He was not expected on time, but when seven o'clock came, his friends became uneasy.

An old and true wife, who has loved him for fifty years, opened the door and peered out into the terrible and forbidding storm as often and anxiously as a young bride. A party consisting of Messrs. E. D. James, W. G. Klumnell and others at once started in search of him. The road lies in a wide marshy river bottom with no houses in sight for miles. It was a little after seven when they started, and a heavy wind was blowing from the north bringing more snow and drifting it in great banks.

To ride was impossible, so the search must be made afoot. When they reached the bottoms the ground was not frozen, and at times they would sink to their knees in mud and water. This would mix and freeze upon their feet, making a weight to carry that rendered walking very difficult. But they forged their way wading creeks and logs, stumbling over cushionknuts and plunging into snow-drifts, while the piercing north wind chilled and shrieked as if revelling in the very horrors of such a night. Still they struggled on looking for traces of the old man that had so fearlessly ridden out five hours before, inspired by the spirit of duty, disinterested and humane mission, a spirit a hundred fold more religious and a thousand times more acceptable to Heaven than many a spread-eagle prayer delivered in fine cimevises. The snow was so deep they could not follow the road, so they concluded to travel the bottoms occasionally as they traveled toward Paradise in order to crop any trail that might have been made that night, but at last they lost their searching altogether and discovered they were but themselves in that terrible storm.

I have read of the horrors of snowstorms in colder climates, but to fully appreciate what they are, one must be in them exhausted, freezing and lost. To walk briskly they could keep from freezing, but they had dragged their clogged feet through the mud and water and snow till it was evident that speed could not be kept up long. The only hope was to retrace their steps but they had circled and zigzagged till it was doubtful whether this could be done and it was more doubtful whether their strength would hold out. But something must be done and they chose the only alternative. It was a fearful undertaking to rewalk the whole distance, just as they had gone and, which, though at last accomplished, they probably will never forget.

For five hours they had beaten, floundered and stumbled through the woods, and you should have seen that expedition party drag into town, to have realized what they had gone through. It looked as if it were impossible for them to get one foot before the other, and their beards were solid sheets of ice. Mr. Klumnell who under the circumstances deserves more credit and especial mention fared worse. One ear and both feet were frozen and the ice accumulated in his shoes till it cut and rubbed through his socks deep into the flesh. He looked like the ghost of Dr. Franklin or some of his crew.

But what of the old man? Why, just as we might have expected. Going up had given him a polster and the old coon was too sharp to venture back, and when that party was looking for his tracks, they lost themselves, he was snugged away in a good warm bed, sawing gourds and dreaming of big Star Route contracts and brown stone fronts, "where the lilacs blossom and the apple tree blushes to bloom. He knew to breast that storm northward would be a ride to death, and he very shrewdly checked Uncle Sam's nomination.

SUBSIS.

Washington Letter.

[From our regular Correspondent.]

The recently scattered Congress is together again. The organization of the House has been completed by the announcement of the standing committees, and both branches have settled down to a solid six months session.

The Speaker of the House is at last through with the delicate and difficult work of committee making. He has been subjected to very heavy pressure, and has had quite a hard time over some of the popular places. The pressure has been much worse than it was two years ago, some of the new members being particularly unreasonable in their demands. Almost every man called for a chairmanship, and certain new members asked that old and experienced Congressman be made to stand aside for them.

Speaker Carlisle looks pale and careworn, and the strain of his recent task of making up committees is plain to see. Many questions important and grave to the people of the United States will be considered by the committees he has just arranged. He made them up after long deliberation, solely with regard to the interests of the country, and with reference to maturing legislation and securing a favorable hearing on the floor of the House. Certain members are disgusted with the assignments they have received, of course, but their irritation will subside as the session progresses. Mr. Carlisle's work commends itself as a whole to those who realize the difficult ies in trying to please three hundred men whose abilities and opinions differ widely on many questions, and whose egotism and ambition are unparalleled. Possibly he has made some mistakes, but even his political enemies concede that his judgment is excellent, and that his motives are pure. One thing, at least, is certain. No Committee has been made for any ignoble purpose, as has been the case often in the last quarter of a century. Nor will there be that trading of Chairmanships for personal interests, that there has been in the past.

The usual importance attached to the formation of committees this year is greatly increased the Speakers' work and added to his trying perplexities. He worked day and night while Congress was engaging the holidays. Indeed Mr. Carlisle has so much industry as President Cleveland and he be quite unremitting in giving his attention wholly to business. Like the President he is rarely seen out in society.

Secretary Manning is another hard worker. No one unfamiliar with the details of the Treasury Department can have any idea of the immense amount of mere routine work he takes upon himself. Most of this work he could entrust to a subordinate as his predecessors did, but he prefers to look after his own responsibilities. Unlike the President and Speaker of the House, Mr. Manning likes society, especially dinner parties, and expects to entertain extensively this winter.

Under the new regime there is a much stricter enforcement of Department rules. Clerks are required to be at their desks now by nine o'clock in the morning, and they are not permitted to leave them until the clock strikes four in the afternoon. In the Treasury Department note is made of any violation of these rules, and every clerk is required to report the time of their arrival to the Chief Clerk. Consequently Treasury employes are kept in a state of perturbation from the time they awake every morning until they get into the department safely on time. The Government gets a good deal more work for the money it pays them. When these rules went into effect the daily average of tardy at the Treasury was over two hundred. Now, out of about two thousand employes, the average of delinquents is from six to ten, though occasionally the record is entirely clear.

There is a steady removal going on in the departments here, and scarcely a day passes without some displacement of Republicans and appointment of Democrats to fill their places. Still the incumbents have not abandoned hope in spite of everything and with each menacing examples daily before their eyes. "There will not be one of you left to-morrow, or two years from now," said a Republican Senator to a Department clerk recently. And there was much truth in his remark. All life and intelligent employes will go in the course of time.

Utica, Ky.

JAN. 2.—Mr. W. N. McCormick has moved to the flats near Masonville, where he is engaged in getting out timber the rest of the winter.

Mr. Mike Moore has finished plastering the new school house. Mr. N. B. Alvord did the painting.

The New Year's tree given to the students of Glenmville school was a very pleasant affair. Quite a number of presents were distributed among them all. One of the most pleasing features was the splendid music discoursed by the Utica string band.

Some are stripping tobacco, but not a good season as yet.

We have been visited by quite a number of candidates in the last two or three weeks. They seem to be rather numerous.

Rev W. P. Bennett filled his regular appointment at Oak Grove in the negro church last Sunday. Nothing has been done about town lately, doubling a quarter at that place, which was destroyed by the fearful tornado of last summer.

The meeting at Green Brier is being carried on with great interest, Rev. John Bennett, pastor.

Rev. S. B. Smith closed his meeting at Glenmville last week, with about fifty additions. Since then he has been engaged at Brushy Fork. SCRIBNER.

A DEFICIT

of Nearly $200,000 in the State Treasury.—The Auditor's Report.

Louisville Post: The Auditor of State has presented the people of Kentucky with a Christmas gift in the shape of a report which shows that there will be a deficit of $200,185.32 in the annual budget. This deficit will appear, notwithstanding that since the last report there has been received into the Treasury $162,504 derived from the sale of bonds ordered to be issued to fund the floating debt of the State. That is not all. The Auditor estimates that the deficit for the ensuing year will be $196,286 62. To this the current expenses for money of the School and Sinking Funds was borrowed, and had to be paid back out of the proceeds of the bonds. The rate of taxation was increased five cents on the $100, which yielded an increase of seventy-five thousand. But the Legislature which made this increase also recklessly made appropriations amounting to more than $284,000.

Democratic Policy.

Policy! That party, sect or section that is governed purely by the governing policy is unworthy of the confidence of patriots and christians as well.

The statesman whose only conception of political affairs is embraced in the policy of the party expediency, is not worthy of the proud title.

The just needs of the sovereign people should be ascertained, and no exertion should be omitted that will do aught to satisfy those needs.

As for those who are not actuated by divine principle—

"Let them go down to the die dust whence they sprung, Unhonored and unsung!"

Democracy, remember the Republican party failed to fulfill many of its promises to the country; that there were thousands of voters dissatisfied with Republican policy; that long have the people prayed your advent into power, and that you are now in power;

Democracy, you are not here "for the offices" alone, or to preach and practise the old heathen war cry, "To the victors belong the spoils;" but with the blessing of God by the sovereign will of the people, you are here to give economic and honest government; to be limited in all your official acts to the strict letter of the Federal Constitution; to endeavor to lighten the burdens of taxation on the people; to avoid foreign complications, to protect the Constitutional rights of every citizen of the Union; to secure to Labor it's just rewards, and to Capital it's legitimate profits; to maintain a healthy and natural business system, and to cultivate virtue and intelligence!

Democracy, you have a grand mission! Remember your glorious and historic past, your noble progenitors, your eternal principles of truth, justice and right, and strike for "God and your native land!

Chauncey Depew's Last Cigar.

The Hon. Chauncey M. Depew was in Albany one day attending to meetings of the New York Central stockholders. Meeting a friend, the leader of a cigar factory Depew smelled an interesting reminiscence, which we give in Mr. Depew's words: "I was a confirmed smoker smoking twenty cigars a day, and I smoked a dozen years ago, when I gave up the habit. I now do not tolerate a cigar. Twelve or thirteen years ago I found myself suffering from indigestion, with wakeful little nights, nervousness and inability to apply to mental strain. I was in the city of Albany one day and bought a twenty-cent Partaga. I was walking up and down Broadway, and at the corner of State street I took the cigar out of my pocket and looked at it. I had smoked about an inch of it. A thought struck me. I had been recalling a fortune several times in the unhealthfulness of the use of tobacco I looked at my cigar and said: 'You are responsible for this disorder.' I threw that Partaga into the gutter and resolved not to smoke again. For six months I suffered the torments of the damned. I wanted to smoke, for I absolutely relished. My appetite meanwhile was growing better my sleep was growing better, and I could eat meat. I did not smoke up to two or three years ago. After I had smoked for two hours continuously one day, after a night I thought I would try a cheroot a soothing influence. I lit a cigar. It was delicious. I enjoyed the aroma of the smoke and the pleasure I felt in my room than I can say. The next day I smoked four cigars and the next two. I found the use of tobacco was affecting my physical system and I stopped. I suddenly and have not experienced again the probable never shall."

MOTHER'S FRIEND.

MAKES CHILD BIRTH EASY

The Rime has come at last when the suffering expectant confident to Ida's way, certified perfect life can be avoided. All unnecessary pain, also passed the greatest portion of all its dark days even in this country. Invented by a practical physician, who has had thirty years experience in treating women in the critical hour, and who suffering women, the world over, North Carolina relies us that she would like to thank the proprietor of this remedy for bringing it to her notice, as in her own case confinement she lost two doctors, and they were compelled to use chloroform, instrumentation, and she suffered almost death; but this time she used "MOTHER'S FRIEND," and her labor was short, quick, and almost like sleep. Now, why should a woman suffer when she can avoid it? We can prove all we claim by living witnesses, and anyone interested can call on or have their husbands do so at our office, and see the original letters, which we cannot publish.

This remedy is sold by druggists, who will furnish circulars, but it is a most wonderful liniment to be used after the first two or three months.

Send for our treatise on the Health and Happiness of Women, mailed free, which gives all particulars.

The Louisville Semi-Weekly Post.

PROSPECTUS.

During the past few months the demand for the Post has greatly increased in the country, its popularity being particularly marked in the interior of Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana. Some difficulty has been experienced, however, because it could not reach remote sections as soon after publication as was desired, owing to the necessary delay in mails that control the movement of trains, while in other sections it has enjoyed unusual advantages over competing papers in this respect, and we have been enabled to furnish a portion of our subscribers with the latest news from twelve to fifteen hours in advance of our contemporaries. In order to lessen the difficulty suggested we have determined to issue a SEMI-WEEKLY edition, which will contain carefully selected news matter, full and accurate reports of the markets and other features which will enable it to render it attractive and almost indispensable to the farmers, merchants and to the general reader of the interior. In addition to this, to furnish this interesting edition to subscribers in any part of the country for only per annum. The cheapness of the Semi-Weekly Post will cause no one to detract from its merits. The duty for high-priced newspapers has passed. We have reduced to that the cheapest the paper the more readers it has and the more its columns are sought by advertisers.

Big bargains in white Shaker flannel at Anderson's Bazaar.

Practice honesty instead of professing it, and pay me what you owe me.

L. F. WORNICK.

Otis B. Render sold sixty-five fat hogs to Press Ross yesterday at 3¾ to 4 gross.

Thomas Bros. will receive 25 barrels of flour this week, which they will sell at $4 per barrel.

Mrs. B. A. Patton has been quite sick the past week, but has recovered sufficiently to be up again.

Ladies needing anything in the line of trimmed hats, can get them at just half price at Anderson's Bazaar.

Hueker & Tabor, Rosine, Ky., will sell 15 pounds of N. O. sugar, for $1, or 25 pounds or more, at 6½ cents per pound. Also good white-stock boots for $3. 2tf

Anderson's Bazaar has a lot of ladies' cloaks, which are offered at one dollar a piece. These are not late style goods but are worth twice the amount asked for them.

Capt. James Suttenger, who left last week with twenty logs for Evansville, got as far as Livermore and tied up, on account of the cold weather, and low water in Green River.

From this time on until the middle of February, you can buy goods cheap at Anderson's Bazaar, as there are many lines of goods that will be sacrificed in preference to carrying them over.

Col. J. M. Dodd, formerly of Hopkinsville, will soon have the Calhoun paper resurrected. The Calhoun is an old newspaper man, and will no doubt make the Calhoun paper a success.

Why pay full price for the goods that you need now, or will soon need, when you can come to the auction sales, under the HERALD office, and buy them, at, from ten to seventy-five per cent. cheaper.

The mail carrier from here to Bellville did not arrive till late Monday night, and reported snow banks up to the ends of his mail bags. He says he had to wait two hours at Hines' mills to cut the ice before crossing.

The auction sales in the postoffice building will begin this evening at one o'clock, and continue until four p. m., and will adjourn till Thursday, at ten-thirty, a. m., and continue from day to day until the goods are all sold.

JNO. P. BARRETT.

The five days preceeding this, has been genuine winter weather. The thermometer, Tuesday morning early, touched 22 degrees below zero, which was as cold as ever known here in the recollection of the oldest citizen.

The goods to be sold under the HERALD office at auction this evening, consists of boots and shoes for ladies, men, boys, girls and children, hats for ladies, gentlemen and boys, notions of every kind, coats, pants, and vests for men, woolen goods, not goods, etc.

We had a promise of a communication from Frankfort this week, but as all the legislative news. We waited for it, but it did not reach us until it was too late for us to get up a summary of it. We do not think, however, that much has been done as yet.

Mr. B. B. L. Cummings, of Canton, Ohio, is here to put up the iron bridge. He is tearing down the old bridge and will have it so that it will not do to cross on after next Sunday. It will take eight or ten days after the old one is down before the new one is ready for use.

Mr. Warren Barnett was up in the Fordsville country when the snow storm came on, and in coming home Saturday, he encountered snow breast deep to his horse. A man that could face the music and ride such a day as last Saturday, has the right grit for a good assessor.

Mr. Jno. P. Foster shipped last Monday, to Mr. J. W. Hyde, Trimo, Tenn., one of his thoroughbred Berkshire pigs. He is four months old, weighs 128 pounds and has been christened Tennessee King. This is Mr. Hyde's second order to Mr. Foster, for Berkshires, within a year past.

The weather began to turn cold Thursday night and Friday morning early it began snowing rapidly, and we had a fearful snow storm all day. Friday night it turned very cold, the thermometer registered below zero, and it has varied from that point to 12 degrees below up to this writing, Monday.

When we came to the office yesterday morning we asked our devil what he thought of the weather. He responded: "It was so cold last night that when I went to bed I tried to blow out the lamp, but could not do it. I took off the chimney to see what was the matter, and found that the blaze was frozen, and had to break it off to put it out. Fact, sure."

The County Court of Claims held a session of five days last week, and it was one of the most harmonious sessions ever held, the ayes and nays not being called a single time. They reduced the poll tax from $0,30 to $0.25 for 1886, and the advalorem tax was reduced from 20 to 15 cents. The financial condition of the county is excellent. There are 18 inmates in the county poorhouse.

Joseph I. Harder, Esq., of Fordsville, has authorized us to say that he is a candidate for Jailer of Ohio county. He is one of the best Democrats that ever lived in Ohio county, and has always been an active worker for the party. If all those who have been elevated to office through his hard work will now give him a lift, he will surely succeed. He has filled the positions of magistrate and constable in the Fordsville district for a number of years, to the satisfaction of the people, and is well qualified for the office of jailer, for he is a sober, sensible, industrious man. He is a deserving citizen and Democrat, and if elected will faithfully discharge every duty incumbent upon him

The Magistrates' Visit.

We wish all the members of the County Court could have responded to Prof. Alexander's invitation, and attended the morning exercises of our college on last Friday. However, a quorum was present; and though on their return to the courthouse they did not formally and actually express an opinion of what they had seen and heard in the chapel, yet they may be here constructively stated that there was nowise any lack of auspicious estimate thereof amongst them. The large number of rudimentary scholars, freshfaced and bright of lineaments, innocence and hope, vessels clean and of honour, and similar in immaculateness to the plumose flakes Mother Goose was now scattering—the respectable band of several brave young men and handsome young women (the rejuvenescent and gallant gray-haired inquire from the Rockport district said, God bless the girls!) who are, earnestly and sufficiently we trust, preparing themselves to engage in the strife that the assumption of responsibility entails the children of men into—and the apparently qualified and zealous instructors, holding places of grave trust and difficult labor, —certainly attracted the notice and excitted the benevolence of each worshipful magisterial visitor; and each of them doubtlessly heartily endorsed the remarks of the eloquent divine, the worthy principal, and of that young professor whom futurity smiles upon, purporting in substance that the heart should be cared for as well as the head. And if in open court a motion had been put, proposing that the claims of Hartford College for stronger support and warmer sympathy from the good people of Ohio County be allowed, it would have unanimously and properly been carried.

Hartford Revival.

The meeting in progress at the Baptist church, has already effected a very general religious awakening, among almost all classes. The members of all denominations, worshipping in our town, are taking a common interest in the good work, and all are rejoicing, as they witness the triumphs of a religion, alike precious to all. There have been a number of professions, among whom are some of our most prominent and honored citizens. Dr. Coleman is being assisted by Revs. W. C. Taylor, E. H. Maddox, J. S. Taylor, and T. J. Bean, besides a large band of christian workers, representing all denominations in our town, who are greatly encouraged in their work. The indications are of such character as justifies the conclusion that the meeting will yet continue many days.

Distances from Hartford to Other Points.

John J. McHenry, who assisted in the survey recently made by the Kentucky Geological Survey corps, has furnished us the distances from Hartford to other points, as follows, viz:

The Henderson, Hartford and Bowling Green Railroad.

"Uncle Rube," in a communication to the Henderson Gleaner, has the following to say of the above projected road:

"What next we need of is the Henderson and Louisville road through a section of country wealthy and rich in its productions, vast in its mineral resources, and many other attractions to make it a paying road, and with the natural force of circumstances will build itself, for Louisville must have direct communication with the Gulf trade. Look at your map: You can see the connection and its importance. Well, very good. What comes next? As Owensboro needs the bridge for a western outlet, so do Hartford, Calhoun, Morgantown and Bowling Green. The first three have no outlet. Bowling Green's is circuitous. Count the wealth of Daviess, McLean, Ohio, Butler and Warren. Think of the immense flow of travel and traffic. What ponderosity to doubt? Isn't it practical reasoning? But perhaps you are a doubting Thomas. If so take your map and let your eye face upon Indiana, then Illinois and so on—a net-work of railroads—many of them passing through sections of country not more rich or half the area of the same extent superior for production or mineral resources. But now that which applies itself practically to one section will apply itself to another, all things being equal. Let us reh-arse the values of central Kentucky. First is the fertility of her soil. What are her crops? Tobacco, corn, wheat, rye, oats, grasses with all characters of cereals and fruits. Look at her coal fields, timber and stone, a wealthy and intelligent people. Will any common sense man doubt the fact of a near future of a railroad through such a section? I think not. I see some newspaper has wisely suggested the propriety of one line for both roads across Green river. The idea is a good one. Why not one track for both roads to the bridge here. The distance is short to Henderson, Owensboro or Hartford. Mr. Editor, I see I'm growing too lengthy and perhaps wearisome. One more thought and I close. The winter months are upon us, when out-door work must cease at least for awhile. Much has been said and written about these roads, especially the Henderson and Hartford road. Its charter is intact and in the possession of good men. Let the friends of the road resolve themselves, Kelsey like, into a committee of the whole, work faithfully and one another autumn you will see the fruits of your labor ripening for your enjoyment and the road an undoubted future success. Capital is seeking investment. Work, nothing daunted, and in faith and believing—and victory is certain."

A Model Young Man

And one that we admire with all the sincerity of our heart (?) struck out office the other day when we were all absorbed writing some editorials, local happenings such as marriages, births, deaths, thrilling incidents and heart-rending accidents, and the compositors yelling every few minutes "copy, copy." When we arose to greet him he flopped down in our cushioned chair with the gusto and suavity of a millionaire. Then leisurely took up our pen and gave it a trial, ordered a fresh sheet of paper, we handed some, he remarked he preferred the office letter head, so we substituted the desired article and when he finished writing he asked for an envelope, we handed some to match the letter, he did not like that, wished the plain white, so wishing to see how far his wants would go, we broke a box just ready for job work, and when addressed, he asked for a stamp; we told him we did not have any, but had a sickle; he said that would do and took it, and went sauntering off down street with his hat cocked and a 10 cent cigar in his mouth, to spin yarns that would put Gulliver or the modest and renowned Kentucky Ian Joseph Mulhatton to blush. We wager that neither his board or wash bills have been paid lately if he could manage to beat the parties out of them. Well, these are the kind of men we like (?). Come again It is such a genuine pleasure to have you, and it cost us nothing to furnish a comfortable office, desk, pens, ink, paper, envelopes, and waste our valuable time while our place is occupied for hours at a time—Oh I'll tell you what we'll do, we'll proceed to have visitors on our busiest day when we scarcely have time to get the paper out, and if we do not spend an hour or so explaining the mysteries of the lofty reelm, have them get mad and use hard things. These are the kind of visitors that euthuse us with pleasure! I be sure to come often. This is no fancy sketch, but a genuine pen picture from real life.

DIED.

TALLEY.—Barton Talley died, at his home, a few miles above Hartford, last Friday night, of consumption, after a long and painful illness.

The public debt of the United States declined in December $9,000,000, the total reduction for the year being nearly $70,000,000, and it was not a year for revenue either. In December, 1884, there was an actual increase of the public debt, so it seems that the Democratic Administration can collect the money from the people and pay the debt as well as did the Republicans, but it is to be borne in mind that it is not by the Republican party, nor the Democratic party, but the people of the United States whoare paying this debt.—Courier-Journal.

Pete's Prospects to Pull Hemp.

Peter Hines, a coon that once inhabited these parts, is in jail in Cincinnati, charged with the murder of a Mr. Kemper on the morning of December 30th.

The Cincinnati Enquirer one day last week had the following:

"Developments yesterday in the Kemper murder point conclusively to Peter Hines as being the perpetrator of the brutal crime. The fellow still maintains his innocence, and says he can prove that he had nothing to do with the crime.

"Two important witnesses came to the front last night, and made statements that will prove very damaging to the accused. The first of these is the boy who was said to have seen a colored man with blood on his hands on Eighth street and Central avenue the morning of the murder. The boy, who proves to be a bright newsboy, came to the station-house last evening, accompanied by his father. He says that about six o'clock last Wednesday morning he was on Eighth street, near Central avenue, when he was approached by a tall colored man, who asked him where he could find a hydrant. Just at this time a policeman appeared on the distance and the fellow entered a hallway. He reappeared a few minutes later and walked down Eighth street.

"The boy, on being asked if he could identify the man, said that he thought he could. He says that he saw a part of the fly cell, where the prisoner is confined. On catching sight of Hines the lad exclaimed: "That is the man that had the blood on his hands!" Hines seemed very much disconcerted and hung his head. At the request of the officers the boy's name is not published.

"About nine o'clock last night a young colored man, who is employed in a Vine street club-room, came to Central Station and related the following: 'I have known Hines since 1876. He and I were raised together in Hartford, Ohio County, Kentucky. Hines has been in innumerable scrapes in his native town, and has cut and shot a number of persons. On the night before the killing of old man Kemper, Hines was at my house until twelve o'clock playing the banjo. When he got ready to go he told my wife and myself that he had to get up early to attend to some business in which there was big money. At that time I didn't pay any attention to the remark, but when I heard of the murder I was reminded of it very forcibly.'

"The young man's statement was taken down by Chief of Detectives Grannan, who considers it very important.

"Detective Grannan, who has assumed direction of the investigation, yesterday examined the wounds on Kemper's head, and concluded that they must have been inflicted by a left-handed man. It is a striking coincidence that Hines is left-handed.

"Hines continues to insist that he has not been in Kemper's store since Christmas week. Colonel Hudson received information yesterday that he had at different times threatened to kill three citizens

"A small boy yesterday afternoon brought to Chief's office a heavy hickory club and stated that a lady would be up later to explain about it. The club was found in the vicinity of Kemper's store, and has on one end mud and hair. It may possibly be the weapon that Kemper's murderer used, though his wounds indicate that they were done with the poll of a hatchet."

It is well known here among the colored people that Hines is left-handed. He is a bad coon and had been in many difficulties before leaving here.

A Query.

Editor Herald:

Will you please let me know through the columns of your next issue what you think of a board of trustees that would allow the tin gutters on a new ten thousand-dollar college building to rust in holes until the rain running through has rotted the handsome floor on said ten thousand-dollar college building? Hay wanted.

J. K. McCormick is again to the fore in the cattle trade. He recently sold a fine Shorthorn heifer, which was raised by his silent partner, Mr. Susan Howard, for the sum sum of $80.

Worth Bosley and Jas. A. Montgomery, have built new houses. Mr Montgomery's house is a beautiful cottage, and cost $600.

Mr. C. Mosely has twenty fine young mules, and a noble flock of Cotswold sheep, to say nothing of his herd of Shorthorns.

By the way, "Sick" Mosley and "Uncle Billy" Roach are prospective candidates for the office of surveyor, and have been surveying lands and roads to get in practice, using ropes instead of a Hunter's chain.

I found the Hartford HERALD a favorite newspaper in the homes of several citizens of Masonville precinct, Daviess county.

I had the pleasure to meet with Prof. Cicero Maxwell Cundiff, Principal of Livermore Academy. The spring session of Livermore Academy will begin Monday, January 18th 1886, under the management of Prof. Cundiff and Miss Donnie Holbrook. They are first-class educators.

The President's Message was a grand document, and he coined some splendid new maxims for Democratic politics, but I fear he is rather weak on "tariff reform," while I have no faith in the efficacy of his proposed financial policy. It smacks too much of Wall street and the "gold bugs," generally. Silver, as long as we have silver and gold money, or a specie basis, is undoubtedly the poor man's money. The coinage of silver should be free and unlimited. We can never maintain the equilibrium between gold and silver without a double standard. We can never have a double standard without the free and unlimited coinage of silver as well as gold. Both must be free, unlimited, and equally a full legal tender by Government statute, and all the paper money must be legal tender for all dues, private and public, if we maintain the three on a level—if their purchasing power continue the same. We must give silver an equal chance with gold to make it "good as gold." To make paper money, or promises to pay, on a par with gold or silver we must have dollar for dollar in a case of gold —and this brings us to H. D. Taylor's articles in the HERALD. His plan is sound and safe—for "specie basis."

Mr. Taylor's system would end the bonded plan, wipe out the national banking system, stop the interest on the national debt, and give us a free, stable, uniform currency. Of course, to accomplish all this would take some time, but such would be the final result. Now, Mr. Taylor, add to your system a low, national rate of interest, say two per cent., and we would have uniform currency and interest, the speculative, gambling and usury classes would not have so great a leverage of money power over the laboring and producing classes, to accumulate unearned property, and the problem of labor and capital would be virtually solved.

Gathering in the Sheaves.

John Thomas Burdett was born in Marion county, Kentucky, November 4th, 1821, and was the ninth child and 5th son in a family of eleven children, three surviving him, one brother and two sisters. He married Miss Harriet M. Mercer, sister to George Mercer, now living near Mt. Etna, Ohio county.

He was converted in early life, and was a faithful follower of his Saviour to the close of his long and useful life.

"Uncle Jack," as he was familiarly called, was a Methodist, but loved all of God's people.

He came to Ohio county in the year 1851, and has lived on the farm on which he died for the last 32 years. He died of bronchial pneumonia, at his home three miles southwest of Fordsville, Saturday, January 2d, 1886. At 1 o'clock, P. M., Sunday, the 3d inst, his remains were interred in Mt. Etna cemetery. He leaves a wife and two children, a son and daughter.

Pointers in Business Advertisers.

(Danville Tribune.)

Don't expect an advertisement to tear fruit in one night.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan, either.

The enterprising advertiser proves that he understands how to buy, because in advertising he knows how to sell.

People who advertise only once in three months, forget that most folks can not remember anything longer than about seven days.

If you can manage cardinally by advertisement, it is a great point gained. The fair sex doesn't hold all the curiosity in the world.

Quitting advertising in dull times is like heading out the dam because the water is low. Either plan will prevent good times from ever coming.

Trying to do business without advertising is like whaling at a pretty girl through a pair of green goggles. You may know what you are doing, but nobody else does.

Enterprising traders are beginning to learn the value of advertising the year round. The persistency of those who are not intimidated by cry of hard times, but keep their names ever before public, will surely place them on the right side in the end.

A Help in Good Digestion.

(The Cosmopolitan.)

In the British Medical Journal Dr. W. Roberts, of England, discusses the effect of liquors, tea, coffee and cocoa on digestion. All of them retard the chemical processes, but most of them stimulate the glandular activity and muscular contractions. Distilled spirits retard the salivary or peptic digestion but slightly when sparingly used.

Wines were found to be highly injurious to salivary digestion. On peptic digestion all wines exert a retarding influence. They stimulate the glandular and muscular activity of the stomach. Effervescent wines exert the greatest amount of good with the least harm to digestion. When one's digestion is out of order everything goes awry, indigestion is the cause of T. T. Seals, of Bellaire, Ohio, who had had dyspepsia for seven years, the digestive apparatus is kept in appropriate eating order by Warner's Tippecanoe the best appetite producer and regulator in the world.

Tea, even in minute quantities, completely paralyzes the action of the saliva. The tannin in strong tea is injurious. Weak tea should be used, if at all. Strong coffee and cocoa are also injurious if used in excess.

Household Hints.

Worm wood or pennyroyal will drive out ants.

Salts of lemon will take stains from ivory knives.

Camphor will prevent moths; the gum near your silver will keep it bright.

When wall paper is discolored by the hair of people rub carefully with stale bread.

Use white oil cloth, bound with red, back of kitchen table, wash stands, and under books to hang tin.

If you wet the upper crust of a pie with milk just before putting it into the oven it will be a rich and yet a delicate brown without baking until the crust crumbles.

To make paper adhere to tin is sometimes a housekeeper's wish, and adhesion also; it may be done by making a paste of gum tragacanth and water—to which add a few drops of oil of vitriol. The druggist of whom you purchase the material will direct you in regard to quantity.

Completely Used Up.

From all quarters the same testimony comes as to the virtue of Swift's Specific. After trying all of the mercury and potash nostrums, a man from the mountains of West Virginia has this to say:

I was completely used up with blood and kidney disease; I used S. S. S. Specific, and in two months I was perfectly cured. For the benefit of those who are suffering with these diseases, I recommend S. S. S. as far better than all other medicines used in such cases, as I have tried them all. Any information on this subject asked of me I will gladly give.

Cured.

A man can no more hold himself entirely aloof from the thoughts of others than from the sunlight and air around him; both will influence and form him him, whether he desire it or not. Of course he can shut himself away from a large measure of either, and grow cadaverous and weak, bodily and mentally, in consequence, but that will not make what little power is left in him more entirely his own. The best thinker is he who gladly welcomes every aid, who weighs every opinion, respects every earnest conviction, and gratefully adopts such ideas as approve themselves to his judgment, yet at the same time it works over all he receives in the crucible of his own mind that the gold may be tested and the dross expelled. When he gives it to others by lip or pen, it is not less, but more his very own than if he had not enriched his mind from so many sources.

Cure for Piles.

PILES are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some disorder of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Boanke's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the tumors, allaying the intense itching and effecting a permanent cure. Price 50c. Address The Dr. Boanke Medicine Co., Piqua, O. Sold by Z. Wayne Griffin & Bro., Druggists, Hartford, Ky. 2-1y

The Best Baking Powder.—Interesting Tests Made by the Government Chemist.

Dr. Edward G. Love, the present Analytical Chemist for the Government, has recently made some interesting experiments as to the comparative value of baking powders. Dr. Love's tests were made to determine what brands are the most economical to use, and as their capacity lies in their leavening power, tests were directed solely to ascertain the available gas of each powder. Dr. Love's report gives the following:

Name of the Cubic Inches thus Baking Powders, per each ounce of Powder.	Strength
"Royal," cream tartar powders	427.1
"Pure and wholesome powder"	153.2
"Hamford's" (phosphate) fresh	122.5
"Hamford's" (phosphate) old	32.7
"Hamford's None such," fresh	121.0
"Hamford's None Such," old	84.5
"Imperial"	117.0
"Charm" alum powder	1.6.0
"Amazon" alum powder	111.0
"Cleveland's" (short weight 7 oz.)	110.0
"Sea Foam"	107.1
"Cor"	100.2
"Dr. Price's"	97.7
"Snow Flake" (trial), St. Paul	101.88
"Lewis," condensed	98.2
"Dynamic," yeast	97.3
"C. F. Andrew & Co's" contains alum	78.17
"Hecker's"	92.1
"Gillet's"	81.2
"Bulk"	80.5

In his report, the Government Chemist says:

"I regard all alum powders as very unwholesome. Phosphate and Tartaric Acid powders liberate their gas too freely in process of baking, or under varying climatic changes suffer deterioration."

Dr. H. A. Mott, the former Government Chemist, after a careful and elaborate examination of the various Baking Powders of commerce, reported to the Government in favor of the Royal brand.

Prosecute the Swindlers!!!

If when you call for Hop Bitters you get a decoy of spurious bitters that effect the druggists hands on any soul called C. D. Warner's German Hop Bitters or with other "Hop" name, follow it and shun that druggist as you would a viper, and if he has kept your money for the stuff inflict him by the trust and we will be damages for the whole and we will reward you liberally for the conviction.

The Man and the Monkey.

"What ails you?" asked the man; I see you are a snitcher, and can scarcely get along."

"Oh, you see," replied the monkey, "my monkey, she has went you on all sendius, very much seronius, my father, he had hoop sores, some big, some little sores, long time. They both took much medicine and died; the sores was all they left me."

"Yes, yes," replied the man. "I see how it is. Your mother inherited the sores, and she, in, and your father caught his on the wing, and you inherited it or was born with both complaints. But why gone away and die when you can be cured?"

"I been done used over sixty bottles one year, store medicine, and it no good. Some all gone and sure here yet. Some doctors charge heap money, but no good."

"Just my friend," said the man, you got hold of the wrong medicine, go to the drug store and get one bottle of B. B. B., and before going all of you will feel better. It is a quick cure. It will cure all sorts of sores, Scrofula, Blood Poison caught on the wing, Itching, Humors, Ulcers, Blood and Skin diseases and Kidney Troubles."

"I be so thankful for your kindness, and will go get B. B. B. to day," replied the monkey.

EYES: OF: FIRE.

"Ah, might I kiss those eyes of fire,
Ten thousand scarce would quench desire;
Still would I keep my lips in bliss,
And revel on each sweet every kiss."

That young dude needs something for his blood; he is utterly too fresh. B. B. B. is the best thing for him, because one bottle will cure him. But that dude is not all alone in his terrestrial glory—not by a "jug full." Many others are constantly getting "full" now about that blood poison business, but B. B. B. will cure for the least money and in the shortest time. The boom is coming. Parity. Purity.

"Oh, Josie," said little giggful Maud, "we are going to have some honey made at our house." "What do you know about that?" "Because mamma sent the servant after three B's, and I don't know what bees are good for only to make honey."

Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., will mail any one a neat wonderful Book Free.

Harper's Magazine
ILLUSTRATED.

The December Number will begin the seventy-second Volume of HARPER'S MAGAZINE. Miss Woolson's novel, "Jupiter Lights," and Mrs. Howell's "Indian Summer" holding the foremost place in the current serial fiction—will run through several numbers, and will be followed by serial stories by Mr. Black, Mr. Besant and Miss D. M. CRAIK. A new editorial department, discussing topics suggested by the current literature of America and Europe, will be contributed by W. D. HOWELLS, beginning with the January Number. The great literary event of the year will be the publication of a series of papers describing the shipwreck of a navy, and depicting characteristic features of American society as seen at our leading pleasure resorts. Illustrated by C. S. REINHART. Other papers will give especial attention to American subjects, treated by the most famous American writers, and illustrated by leading American artists.
